Receives Award Of Saving Life Of Small Child

Conley Petty 121½ South Williams St., Moberly, Mo., was awarded a Certificate of Merit, highest honor bestowed upon an individual by the American National Red Cross, for rescuing a Kansas City mother and her baby following an accident May 12 at Liberty.

The award was presented by Warren Flower, Red Cross First Aid and Water Safety representative for the state of Missouri, at the Randolph county chapter's annual Recognition of Volunteers meeting in Moberly. In observance of the 50th anniversary of Red Cross First Aid, special recognition was given first aid volunteers including Mr. Petty.

The incidents on which the award was based occurred at about 12:30 p.m. while Petty was fishing at Liberty Lakes.

Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Lewis, Jr., 1517 Tracy Avenue, Kansas City, had parked their car above the lake and were fishing. Their 2-year-old son was left in the car. Apparently the car's brakes gave way and the vehicle headed for the lake. Mr. and Mrs. Lewis ran with the car attempting to save their child. The mother took the baby from the car just as it plunged into the water but she was unable to swim. Petty, who had witnesed the tragedy, extended a two by four piece of lumber to the mother by wading into the lake and she was pulled to shore where others assisted her.

The father was pinned beneath the car and drowned. The baby disappeared. Petty, searching for the child, saw his red clothing beneath the water and swam to rescue him. After swimming to shore with the baby's lifeless body, he applied artificial respiration to which the victim responded.

Petty's award, the 876th given in the 16-state Midwestern Red Cross Area in 47 years, was recommended by the Randolph county Red Cross chapter. The Red Cross National Awards committee at Washington, D. C., approved the award after considering eyewitnesses' and physicians' statements on the merit of the life-saving action.

To qualify for a Certificate of Merit, a person must have been trained in Red Cross First aid or water safety, and must have used this training in "saving or attempting to save the life of another in an act adjudged meritorious," according to Flower.

USDA Economist Receives Important Award For Research On Farm Tenure And Efficiency

WASHINGTON—Dr. Walter G. Miller, an agricultural economist of the U.S. Department of Agriculture, has been awarded a certificate of merit and $250 for the most outstanding land economics research reported during 1959.

This award was made to the Jamaica-born economist by the American Farm Economics Association at its recent annual convention at Iowa State University. Similar awards went to two other agricultural economists: J. F. Hudson of Louisiana State University, and Richard Andrews of the University of New Hampshire.

Dr. Miller's research is an exploration of methods that might be used in analyzing farm inefficiencies due to tenure. The work was done under a cooperative arrangement between USDA's Agricultural Research Service and the Agricultural Experiment Stations of Iowa, Kansas, Missouri and Nebraska.

The study will help to open the way to the solution of a complex farm problem. For many years agricultural economists have been interested in determining the extent to which tenure status (full owners, part owners, cash renters, and sharecroppers of farm operators effects their efficiency.

Differnt theories dealing with the subject have been evolved, but only a fw empirical studies have been made to test their validity. The deficiency in agricultural economics research is said to arise, at least partly, from the need for techniques and procedures that will deal adequately with the problems involved.

Dr. Miller's study helps to fill this need. His research is reported in the January, 1959, issue of "Agricultural Economics Research," a USDA quarterly. The title of his report, is: "Comparative Efficiency of Farm Tenure Classes in the Combination of Resources."

The economist first became interested in how tenure affects farm efficiency in his native Jamaica where he worked in the Land Department, assisting in the resettlement of farm families.

A search for the answer brought him to the United States. Here he earned B. S. and M. S. degrees in agricultural economics at the University of [illegible], and the Ph. D. degree in the field at Iowa State University. The latter was awarded in 1956.

As a research associate at Iowa State during his student days, Dr. Miller did most of the research for which he was cited. In his position with the Land and Water Research Branch of USDA's Agricultural Research Service, he is continuing the study of land tenure problems.

Crippled Children's Program To Get Albert Lasker Award

WASHINGTON — The Crippled Children's Program of the Children's Bureau, U. S. Department of Health, Education, and Welfare, is slated to get the 1960 Albert Lasker Group Award by the American Public Health Association.

Announcement of a total of seven awards was made by the Association and the Albert and Mary Lasker Foundation at the 15th annual luncheon given in honor of the recipients in New York Thursday. The awards are for breakthroughs in medical research and advances in public health programs directly benefiting millions of human beings throughout the world.

The Crippled Children's Program of the Children's Bureau was cited for "Pioneering a program of medical care which has vitally helped four and a quarter million handicapped children in the past 23 years.

"Not only were children helped but millions of other handicapped persons, young and old, have benefited by the extensive services which were set up" under the program, the citation states.

"This program is unique in that it has stimulated the extension of the highest quality of services, developing new comprehensive ones when and where needed for cardiac cripples, polio victims, amputees, the epileptic, cerebral palsied, congenitally handicapped, those with speech and hearing defects, with nephrosis and other chronic diseases. Each year the demand for these services has increased, with the rate per 10,000 children served doubling in 22 years.

"Existing private and public agencies, professional and parent groups have been intensively involved in the program. Despite its meager funds, the Crippled Children's Program has made wide use of the potential strength in each community, and has added thereto the scientific direction and the specialized knowledge necessary to develop better services. Its special project grants have also fostered regional and intrastate services for the very hard-to-care-for group. Training of specialists in short supply has been supported.

"This federally supported medical care program with its emphasis on high quality care, is widely approved by physicians, hospitals and local communities everywhere. An administrative triumph of no mean scope has been achieved."

Dr. Arthur Lesser, Director, Division of Health Services of the Children's Bureau, accepted the Award.

Atlanta Patrollers Take D. C., Win Award

By JOHN BRITTON

WASHINGTON, D. C. — (SNS) — Georgia's 5000-plus accident conscious school safety patrolmen Saturday tossed all their preconceived fears to the brick capital wind and stormed through the Constitution Avenue parade area like they owned the town.

Especially noticed and enthusastically received by the thousands of spectators who lined the famuos old parade corridor was Atlantas two thousand eight hundred life savers all dressed in pale blue and white.

Accompanied by a solid rhythmetic beat of the brilliant award winning Washington High School Band, the Atlanta Patrolmen pranced along the avenue like they had come to conquer the town.

BTW BAND RANKS HIGH

And just to make a great award winning year more complete, the Washington High Band marched away with one of seven prizes given to the seven best appearing outfits in the parade. Washington High was one of eighty-two bands that appeared in the parade and the band was chosen among the best seven that marched through the nations capital Saturday. A reason for the Atlanta Patrol groups brilliance could safely be attributed to the band that provided background music as youngsters glided down the avenue of dignitaries.

Led by band master Louis Smith, the Washington High School Band many times strutted a tempo so daringly swift that the crowd of spectators lining the tree shaded avenue stared breathlessly and burst into spontaneous applause that most times are reserved for local talent only.

LARGE GEORGIA UNIT

The Georgia unit was spectacular in its number and brilliance. About 5085 members strong, Georgia was the largest single visiting patrol delegation in the 24th annaul safety patrol parade sponsored by the American Automobile Association. Only the District of Columbia Patrol contingent outnumbered Georgia legions and the Washington unit was the host group

Some 30,000 boys and girls from 22 states and the District of Columbia invated the nations capital this weekend to participate in the 24th annual school safety patrol assembly and parade.

The two-day celebration was highlighted Saturday by the six hour long parade (the longest of its kind in Washington), along historic Constitution Avenue.

As a prelude to the final festivities Friday night was designated National School Safety Patrol Night at Griffith Stadium where some 5000 patrol youngsters watched the Washington Senators bow to the New York Yankees power house.

In the pre-game ceremony Friday five Washington ball players once served on the patrols presented autographed baseballs to five young patrol heroes who were honored for actually saving the life of their school mate in trafic.

TRIBUTE TO PATROL

All of the weekend events paid colorful tribute to the efforts of the nation's 7770,000 safety patrol members who protect the lives of children at school crossings.

The parade Saturday morning began in a brisk autumn-like wind but the high spirited patrol units were seemingly not bothered by the weather. Everything was chilly except their spirits.

The Georgia unit, and especially Atlanta Patrolmen swept down Constitution Avenue like Sherman once swooped through Atlanta, their precision was remarkable, considering that no organized practice had ever been conducted.

The youths, tired as they were after the parade, went on a tour as they romped in the zoo among caged animals of all kinds brought here from world-wide points.

Many stood in awe looking for the first time on the vicious tigers and lions that have been known to attempt to claw curious children who get too close to the cages.

No one so far was hurt in any unusual experience.

The party was over at five p. m., Saturday and the Atlanta youths called it a year in Washington until the next time. They scrambled on the train that is bringing them home and fatigue almost immediately grabbed them and wrestled them to sleep.

ARRIVE AROUND 9:30 A. M.

There will be much for them to tell today at about 9:30 a. m., Atlanta time that is when a special Seaboard Railroad train will speed into Atlanta and deposit its tired young load back into the hands of hundreds of parents.

The train that will carry all of the 270 Negro youths is scheduled to steam into Terminal Station at 9:30 a. m., other trains bearing Atlanta youths will come either earlier or later.

The DeKalb County unit traveled on for more touring and sightseeing in New York City. They are to return home Monday morning.

DURING THE CIVIL WAR, THEY WON:

14 CITATIONS FOR MEDAL OF HONOR

Ajro Magazine Section P.5 Dat. 5-21-60

One of the most decorated outfits of the Civil War was the Ninth and Tenth Calvary Regiments, USCT, who played a large part in the spread of the railroads to the west. They were on hand to fight off Indian raids.

Virtually everybody has heard of the Apache Indian chief Geronimo, but how many persons know that it was the 9th Cavalry U.S. Colored Troops who captured him?

The famous 9th and 10th Cavalry units were mustered near the close of the Civil War and put under the command of white officers, some of whom knew of the heroic battlefield conduct of colored soldiers during the Civil War.

They were first sent into the Wild West to protect the then infant railroads against Indian raids.

Their conduct on the field of battle won them many commendations, but of prime importance is the fact that members of the 9th and 10th Cavalry units won 14 citations for the Congressional Medal of Honor, the highest recognition of valor the United States Army can bestow.

Capture

It was during one of the campaigns of the Indian Wars, that the 9th Regiment captured the defiant Indian chief Geronimo. The 9th is also credited with having conquered the Cherokee Indian chief, Victoria.

Nevertheless, in those troubled times, life was not easy for the troopers of the Buffalo troops.

Stationed at various times in such out - of - the - way posts as Fort Grant, Fort Thomas, San Carlos and Fort Apache in Arizona, and transferred to Fort Custer and Fort Assiniboine in Montana when Indian uprisings occurred, the colored horse soldiers endured all of the suffering and deprivations of the untamed West.

Woodry Strode, left plays the title role of Sergeant Rutledge in the new movie about the 9th Cavalry. Veteran actor Juano Hernandez, plays a pivotal supporting role in the picture.

In addition, when the conscience of Army officials impelled them to relieve the colored soldiers of such hardship duty, it appeared that no one in Washington knew what to do with them.

Pillar to Post

For many months they were shifted from pillar to post, from Chicamauga, Ga., where they were supposed to join the 5th Army Corps for the invasion of Cuba during the Insurrection of the late 1890s, to Lakeland, Fla., to Montauk Park, L.I., to Huntsville, Ala., to Ft. Brown, Tex., and finally to Galveston and off to Cuba on May 17, 1899.

Perhaps one of the most colorful military units in U.S. history, the 9th gets its first full-length movie treatment in "Sergeant Rutledge," made by Warner Bros.

Made in the Monument Valley section of Arizona, the film is a saga of Indian fighting and how a single incident caused by a breakout of braves from a reservation catapulted a heroic top sergeant into being accused of two dastardly crimes.

The title role is played by Woody Strode, former UCLA football star, later a professional wrestler.

Rattler Coach Honored

Chicago Ill.

Gaither Awarded 'Coach Of Decade'

Chicago Defend

Sat. 1-30-60

ATLANTA, Ga. — Coach Jake Gaither of the Florida A&M university Rattlers will be honored as the "Coach of the Decade" among Negro coaches by the 100 Per Cent Wrong Club of Atlanta here in the Waluhaje Hotel Friday night, Jan. 29.

Coach Gaither's 59 National Negro Collegiate Football Champions will receive the Scott Memorial Trophy.

P 133

The personable FAMU athletic director has been a member of the American Football Coaches Association Rules Committee for the past three years and he has sat at the winners' table during the annual meetings of the AFCA for the past several years.

His 15-year football record of 120 wins, 20 losses and four ties places him among the great football coaches of his era. Jack Gaither's past decade record of 81 triumphs, 10 setbacks, and four ties places him at the top of the heap.

The 10-year won and loss record established by the Florida A&M University athletic team under his direction as athletic director is believed to be unequaled by a minority institution. Since 1950, the Rattlers have won 434 victories, shelled out 101 losses, and five contests ended in deadlocks.

A breakdown of the won and loss record of the teams according to individual sports shows that the football team registered 81 triumphs, 10 losses, and three ties; the basketball squad has 200 victories and 49 losses; the baseball nine racked up 153 wins, 42 defeats, and two contests were called with the score being tied.

Yes, the Florida A&M university Rattlers had many successful years during the glorious fifties, but '59 seems to stand head and shoulders above all the many accomplishments made in athletics during the past decade. The Rattlers made a grand slam of the major sports in the Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Conference during the closing year of the fifties. Only the golf championship eluded the Floridians.

Coach Ed Oglesby tutored his basketball team to the visitation and the tournament championships to begin the long string of crowns and trophies brought home last year. The baseball team under the tutelage of Dr. O. A. Moore and Coach Costa Kittles had a 18-1 record and was invited to play in the National Intercollegiate Athletics Association national championship playoffs.

After failing to win its own invitational track and field meet, the FAMU thinclads went on to take the Alabama State college relays, the Tuskegee Relays and the SIAC meet. James Denmark cleared the bar at 13' 10" to smash a loop record that had been held by Willie Farmer of Xavier university since 1941. Denmark has not been defeated in the pole vault since he came to FAMU three years ago.

Like the track team, the tennis team went through the opposition and came out with a clean record. Claude Wilson and Albert Brooks won the singles and doubles titles in the Florida A&M University Invitational, Tuskegee Institute Invitational and the SIAC meets. The netters are coached by Walter M. Austin, a former National Collegiate Champion. The golf team had to settle for second place behind Clark college in both the Tuskegee Institute Invitational and the conference matches.

The football team climaxed the fifties with an unusual National Negro Collegiate Football Championship. Coach Jake Gaither's gridders achieved a national championship with victories over two other conference powers. The Rattlers trounced the North Carolina A&T College Aggies, 28-16, and humbled the strong Southern University Jaguar Cats, 21-14. They completed the season with a 10-0-0 record.

A DISTINGUISHED citation from the "Golden Staters" was presented to Meharry Medical College's president, Dr. Harold D. West, when he visited California recently to address Meharry alumni residing in Southern California. Present for the special citation were left to right: Dr. and Mrs. Harold D. West and Kenneth Hahn, supervisor, Second District, County of Los Angeles.

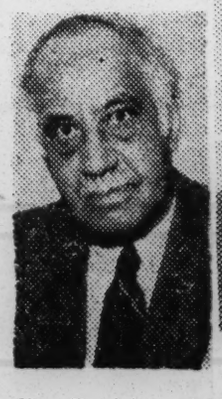
Stanley Braithwaite Spingarn Medal for Bostonian

On May 3, 1918, in the First Baptist Church of Providence, R. I., the Governor of that state, R. Livingstone Beckman, presented the fourth annual Spingarn Award to William Stanley Braithwaite, "for distinguished achievement in literature."



Dr. Braithwaite

Born into a pompous family at Boston, where his university - trained father educated the Braithwaite children at home, Mr. Braithwaite eventually led the movement to have Negro writers address their efforts to general writing, instead of "Negro writing."

A contemporary of Paul Laurence Dunbar, Mr. Braithwaite was a prime personality in the so-called "Harlem Renaissance," that frowned on Dunbar dialect.

One of the first to earn his keep with the pen, Mr. Braithwaite was a moving force during World War I. He sold his productions bi-racially and, beginning in 1913, issued, annually, "The Anthology of Magazine Verse."

By 1918, he had become the laureate of a burgeoning Negro influx of literary figures. Listings of his efforts included "The House of Falling Leaves," "The Poetic Year of 1916," "The Book of Elizabethan Verse," "The Book of Restoration Verse" and "Lyrics of Life and Love."

It was not until 1930, when Dr. Braithwaite was 52, that he took a chair at a Negro shrine (Atlanta University).

Basketball's Best Get Awards

Newell, Sanders and Robertson Honored by Writers Here

Pete Newell of the University of California received a plaque here last night as the basketball coach of the year. The presentation was made at the twenty-seventh awards dinner of the Metropolitan Basketball Writers Association.

The writers also honored the season's outstanding players in the Olympia Room of the Hotel Manhattan. These included Wilt Chamberlain of the Philadelphia Warriors, Oscar Robertson of the University of Cincinnati and Tom Sanders of New York University.

Members of the first and second all-metropolitan college teams also received awards, as did John (Honey) Russell, who is retiring as the coach at Seton Hall University.

The 44-year-old Newell, who coached California to the 1959 National Collegiate title, will give up the job when this campaign ends to become the university's athletic director.

He accepted his award from William J. Briordy of The Times, the chairman of the association. Lou Rossini of N. Y. U. was the coach-of-the-year winner last season.

Two Awards for Wilt

Chamberlain, who has broken all scoring and rebounding records in the National Basketball Association, was the unanimous choice of the writers as the outstanding rookie and the most valuable player in the league. He was the first player to win both awards.

Chamberlain won the Hy Turkin Award as the top rookie and the Sam Davis Award as the most valuable player.

Robertson, who holds all the major collegiate scoring marks, received the Gold Star Award for a record third straight time.

Only one other player has won the Gold Star Award twice. That was Tom Gola of La Salle, who now performs for the Philadelphia Warriors. Gola was honored in 1953 and 1955.

Sanders received the Haggerty Award as the outstanding player in the metropolitan sector. Sanders, Ray Paprocky of N. Y. U. and Tony Jackson of St. John's were unanimous choices for the all-metropolitan first team.

Bill Smith of St. Peter's, Art Hicks of Seton Hall, Jim Raysor of Iona, Ed Auzenbergs of Columbia and Russ Cunningham of N. Y. U. were the second-team players honored.

Russell received a plaque in recognition of his forty-three years in basketball as a coach and player. Russell will devote his time to his insurance business and baseball. He is a scout in the Eastern area for the Milwaukee Braves.

Before the writers staged their show lampooning basketball figures, Phil Foster put the gathering in the proper mood with his comedy routines. Irv Carroll and his piano kept the writers in tune and Les Keiter served as narrator for the show.

PHIALDELPHIA — Three Negro researchers of the U.S. Department of Agriculture were honored recently as part of a team of 16 who have found in wild plants new sources of cortisone and other hormone drugs used in the treatment of arthritis and other ailments.

The three colored researchers are Henry A. Monroe, a chemist; and Robert O. Pierce and Walter Rumph, laboratory assistants, all of Philadelphia.

The work was done at nearby Wyndmoor, Pa., at USDA's Eastern Utilization Research and Development laboratory there. Eight other chemists, a botanist, and four other laboratory aides took part in the research project which earned the group a Superior Service Award.

THE PROJECT was started 10 years ago, shortly after the discovery of cortisone.

Recognizing the need for more widely available sources of the new wonder drug than bile acids of cattle from which the drug was first made, the Department sent botanists around the world in search of plants containing compounds from which cortisone could be made.

Over 8,000 such plants have been found abroad and shipped to the Wyndmoor laboratory. Efforts are now being made to grow some of these plants in the United States to reduce cost, as well as to prevent the country from being entirely dependent upon foreign sources.

It has been pointed out that domestic cultivation of such plants would give American farmers a new crop which could be planted on acres taken out of cotton, wheat, corn, and other surplus crops.

Cited For Carnegie Hero Award

PITTSBURGH, Pa. — (ANP) — A 37-year-old radio repairman was the only Negro among 25 persons cited last week by the Carnegie Hero Fund Foundation for 1959.

He is Alphonso Woodall of Cleveland, Ohio, who saved a white man from the angry waters of Lake Erie while still on crutches as the result of injuries received seven months earlier.

Awarded Bronze Medal

Woodall was awarded a bronze medal by the foundation.

The foundation's official account of Woodall's heroic act follows:

Alphonse Woodall, aged 37, television repairman, saved Louis Fabri, aged 32, bus driver, from drowning, Cleveland, Ohio, October 20, 1959.

At night when their motorboat capsized in rough water in Lake Erie, Fabri and another man clung to it and were carried toward a concrete seawall which rose seven feet above the water. The other man attempted to swim to shore but was drowned.

Men watching from the wall urged Fabri to hold on until the Coast Guard could arrive, but Fabri called that he could not do so much longer.

Woodall, who had broken both feet and a hip, volunteered to go to the aid of Fabri lest he dworn or be dashed against the wall by waves up to eight feet high.

Although he was warned of the danger of entering the rough water, Woodall removed all of his clothing except his trousers, put on a pair of swim fins and a life jacket, and tied a rope around his waist. Others lowered Woodall over the seawall into the rough water.

Even though the loose-fitting jacket impeded his swimming and the waves caused him to swallow water, Woodall swam 40 feet to the overturned boat. Woodall took hold of the stern while Fabri continued clining to the bow.

Several waves truck Woodall about the head with force as the boat supporting them was drawn too near the wall by the rope, Woodall then inches his way to Fabri, once briefly losing his hold and swallowing more water when struck by a wave. One end of another rope was thrown to Woodall, and he tied it about Fabri's wrists.

The men then drew Woodall and Fabri to the wall. As they were lifted to the top of the wall, Woodall fended off from the wall to protect Fabri from being washed against it.

Fabri was nearly exhausted but recovered.

Woodall's injured hip pained him considerably for several days.

Negro Hero Wins Carnegie Award

PITTSBURGH (ANP) — A 37 year-old radio repairman was the only Negro among 25 persons cited by the Carnegie Hero Fund Foundation for 1959.

He is Alphonso Woodall of Cleveland, Ohio, who saved a white man from the angry waters of Lake Erie while still on crutches as the result of injuries received seven months earlier.

N. C. Hero Receives Award Posthumously

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — A 23-year-old Western Carolina College student who died saving a classmate from electric shock was honored posthumously Friday by the Carnegie Hero Fund Commission.

Grover Clifton Peoples of Bayonne, N. J., was one of 26 persons cited for acts of bravery during 1959.

Three other acts of bravery in North Carolina were also recognized.

The commission awarded bronze medals to L. Clifford Horton, 32, of Wendell; James F. Lancaster Jr., 30, of Route 1, Pikeville; and David William Merrill, 13, of Beaufort.

Peoples was electrocuted in a successful rescue of George E. Hart, 24, who had become entangled in an antenna that fell on a 2,400-volt power line. Hart was attempting to salvage the antenna wire last Sept. 7 at the college in Cullowhee, N. C.

He pulled at the antenna and it fell across the power line. The current from the line charged into the antenna wire which Hart was holding.

Called for Help.

Although conscious, Hart was unable to release the antenna. He was knocked to the ground with the wire coiled around his chest. His shirt began to smoke and he called for help.

Peoples used his own shirt to protect his hand, then grabbed the wire and pulled it away from Hart.

Peoples was knocked unconscious and efforts to revive him failed.

Lancaster was honored for rescuing an eight-month-old Negro girl from her burning home at Saulston, in Wayne County, N. C., Dec. 10. He suffered second and third-degree burns which left scars on his hand and face.

The Commission said he ran into the blazing frame home but was forced back by explosive flames. He left the building but returned at the urging of the infant's mother who told him where to find the child. He followed her directions and brought the girl to a window where he handed her to members of her family waiting outside.

Horton, a dentist, was credited with saving the life of Donny Mack Ayscue, four, who dropped into an abandoned well holding 12 feet of water Oct. 30. Horton and Ayscue's father missed the boy but found his cap floating in the well.

Horton jumped in fully clothed and found the boy's motionless body on the muddy bottom. He grabbed the youngster by his clothing and inched his way up to the surface where the boy was revived.

The Commission cited Merrill for the rescue of Dwain A. Musselwhite, four, and his mother, Elizabeth Musselwhite, 29, last Sept. 21. The Musselwhite boy fell from a dock into a dredge stream at Beaufort and was carried downstream.

Mrs. Musselwhite jumped in to rescue him but was only able to hold his head above water as they drifted.

Young Merrill heard their calls for help and ran 600 feet to the water's edge. He swam 30 feet to the two and carried Dwain to shallow water, returning later for Mrs. Musselwhite, who outweighed him by 30 pounds.

CORE Leader, p. . . . 12C

CHICAGO — (UPI) — The youth credited with starting the Southern sit-in demonstrations said Sunday a picture book gave him the courage to do it.

Joseph McNeil, 18-year-old son of a Wilmington, N.C., floor waxer, was in Chicago to receive the "Delta Youth Award" of the Delta Sigma Theta Sorority.

He said he got the idea for protesting lunch counter segregation while he was in high school.

"When I was a freshman at College," he said, "I thought it was finally time something was done."

McNeil did not claim full credit for the sit-ins, but he said, "it was my compulsion and my impulse that got things started."

The book that gave him the motivation was Langston Hughes' "The Pictorial History of the Negro."

"I'd read how other fellows had made sacrifices," he said, "I remembered the kids at Little Rock, and I realized I hadn't made my contribution."

McNeil said he felt the demonstrations had been successful.

"When it started, there was an air of pessimism, we were told we would set community relations back, but I now know more than ever that we were right," he said.

When he returns to North Carolina Agricultural and Technical College in Greensboro McNeil said, "I'll find out the temperament of the other kids — we might sit-in on the hold out restaurants, or maybe the hotels."

McNeil quoted two lines from Langston Hughes' poem "Mother to Son.":

"Life for me ain't been no crystal stair . . .
"But all the time I'se been a-climbin' on."

"Sit-ins which have for their purpose the raising of one of the most preposterous discriminations . . . will win everywhere for the simple reason that they have moral force on their side," McGill said. "They seek to end a situation which affronts human dignity."

McGill was awarded the 1960 Elijah Parish Lovejoy award of Colby College. He was the ninth recipient of the award which is a memorial established in 1952 to a Colby graduate who in 1937 became the first American martyr for freedom of the press.

Hobson R. Reynolds Cites U.S. Aide For Work In Behalf Of Civil Rights

By LOUIS LAUTIER

CHICAGO (NNPA)—The Elks grand lodge presented to Attorney General William P. Rogers Monday at their 61st annual convention the Elijah Lovejoy award because of his contributions in the field of civil rights.

The award is given annually to the American whose contribution in the field of civil rights is regarded as outstanding.

The presentation was made by Hobson R. Reynolds of Philadelphia, grand commissioner of civil liberties, at the annual civil liberties meet, at the Corpus Christi auditorium.

The award is named for Elijah Lovejoy, an abolitionist, who was killed by a mob in Alton, Ill., in 1837.

In presenting the award, Mr. Reynolds told Mr. Rogers that he hoped that the Attorney General will some day "have a medal named for you."

Mr. Rogers was selected for the award by a grand lodge committee "for his championship of civil rights."

Thanking the Elks for the award, Mr. Rogers said he was particularly honored because in past years the award had been given to such Americans as Ralph Bunche, Marian Anderson, Branch Rickey, Thurgood Marshall and others.

But the award should be given, Mr. Rogers said, to those in the Justice Department who have worked hard in the field of civil rights and to whom he paid tribute for the "good work" they have done in the past eight years.

CITED LETTERS RECEIVED

Mr. Rogers said he was not as humble in receiving the award as he should be because some of the letters he has received. He gets so many letters from other quarters, he said, that he was glad to receive this kind of recognition.

As an example of the letters he receives, he cited one:

"Dear Mr. Attorney General: Drop dead. Sincerely yours."

Not only does he receive such letters, the Attorney General said, but his wife also gets letters "indicating clearly how poisonous prejudice is to the individual."

Atty. Gen. Rogers Talks About Rights And Voting

Norfolk, Va.

Date 9-3-60

CHICAGO, Ill.—(ANP)—More Negroes will be voting this year in the South than ever before, but their votes won't have much effect on the outcome of the election.

This was the prediction of United States Atty. Gen. William P. Rogers in a speech at a grand lodge meeting of the Improved Benevolent Protective Order of Elks of the World Rogers addressed the group in Corpus Christi center.

REFERRING TO the Supreme Court decision calling for desegregation in schools, he said:

"As far as I am concerned, the Supreme Court's action makes desegregation the law of the land, but many people are saying it isn't until Congress acts."

Congress could do this, he said, by "subscribing to President Eisenhower's position on civil rights" and by considering laws giving equal job opportunities to minorities and providing aid to school districts in the South.

ROGERS WAS here to accept the Elks annual Elijah Lovejoy award, given to the man who has done the most to advance civil rights.

The award is named after the Alton, Ill., editor who worked to free slaves and is reputed to be the first man to lose his life in the fight for press freedom.

Convention cites non-violent action

Sat. 7-9-60

St. Louis, Mo. — Ghandi Awards, named for the Indian leader who gained world fame for his passive resistance tactics, have been given five Florida students jailed for their sitdown activities in Tallahasse.

The awards were presented by the Congress of Racial Equality at its annual national convention here.

The awards, named after the Indian political leader who symbolized the concept of passive resistance, are given to persons who in the view of CORE "have made substantial contributions through non-violent direct action toward the elimination of discrimination because of race and color."

The five students were arrested at a Tallahassee lunch counter last February. They went to jail on March 18 and were released May 5.

Presenting the awards was the Rev. Wyatt Tee Walker of Petersburg, Va., principal speaker of the evening. Formerly pastor of Gillfield Baptist Church at Petersburg, he is executive director of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference.

IN LITTLE ROCK, Ark. six students who were arrested and received maximum fines of $500 each for a lunch counter demonstration, appealed their cases to a higher court.

Harold B. Anderson, attorney for the students, termed the fines "excessive." The students were arrested on April 13 and fined on June 1.

Anderson filed a motion for a new trial but Circuit Judge William J. Kirby overruled the motion and granted the students an appeal to the State Supreme Court.

Anderson's new trial motion alleged that Judge Kirby, who heard the cases on appeal from Municipal Court, doubled the penalities that had been originally assessed and "erred" in other ways.

In Knoxville, Tenn., Tuesday 62 members of the Knoxville Ministerial Association called on merchants to desegregate lunch counters.

A resolution adopted by the interracial association urged retail store operators to open their eating facilities to all citizens alike. The ministerial group acted after the picketing Monday of Rich's Department Store by dozens of colored and white persons. The store closed its lunch counter indefintely last week following a series of sit-down demonstrations.

COLLEGE STUDENTS in Atlanta, Ga. continued sporadic attempts to desegregate eating places in Rich's downtown store. The management stuck to its policy of "following local custom and laws" in separating colored and white diners.

The Fairfax County Courthouse cafeteria quietly desegregated Wednesday with a brief announcement from its manager, Francis M. Rathwick, who leases the basement cafeteria from the county, saying he decided to open it to all persons after racial barriers were dropped at other Northern Virginia lunch counters last week.

The cafeteria was in the news last September when a colored member of a grand jury, Leslie R. Coates, 52, of Chantilly, Va., protested segregating eating facilities there. He was excused from the jury.

Students at the Berkeley campus of the University of California, have organized a committee to raise funds to aid students whose education has been interrupted as a result of their participation in sitdown demonstrations.

LENIN PEACE PRIZE

DuBois Given Peace Prize

Black Dispatch
Oklahoma City, Okla.

WASHINGTON.—(ANP)—Dr. W. E. B. DuBois, famous scholar, lecturer and author, stated last week that he is still clinging to his dream of America as "a free democracy, where labor is rewarded for work and not by chance, where no one owns what he does not earn, where a man is judged by his deeds and not by the color of his skin, and where every man can believe what he pleases without punishment."

Sat. 7/8/60

This observation was made in Dr. DuBois' acceptance speech at the Soviet Embassy, last week, on the occasion of his receiving the Penin Peace Prize.

The great scholar accepted the prize with humility because, said he, "I doubt that I deserve a prize for advocating peace." But when he was informed that he was selected for this high honor by a unanimous vote of eight nations including representatives of the Soviet Union, China, Czechoslovakia, Great Britain, and France, he realized that he could not in courtesy "ignore the judgment of so large a section of mankind."

The presentation was made by Mikhail N. Smirnovsky for Dr. DuBois' "outstanding services in the cause of the struggle for preservation and consolidation of peace and for the strengthening of peace among the Nations."

Among those witnessing the awards ceremony were Dr. DuBois' wife, Mrs. Shirley Graham DuBois, an author in her own right; his daughter, Mrs. Yolande DuBois Williams, a teacher in Dunbar school in Baltimore; and his cousin, Mrs. Alice Crawford, a soloist, teacher and coach of Brooklyn.

Other guests included Ben Davis, Mrs. Mary Richardson, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Collins and Joanne Grant, all of New York; P. L. Prattis and his daughter, Patricia, of Pittsburgh; Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Green of Baltimore; and Mrs. Madjaska Simkins of Columbia, S. C.

Washingtonians in attendance were: Mrs. Georgia Douglas Johnson and Mrs. Henry Lincoln Johnson, George Murphy, Mr. and Mrs. Evelyn O. Chisley, Dr. and Mrs. Somerville and Dr. and Mrs. J. D. Tyms.

Soon after Dr. DuBois' honor he left the States for Ghana where he and Mrs. DuBois will attend the inauguration of Kwame Nkrumah as president.

Oct. 1-9-60

NEW YORK — Playwright Lorraine Hansberry has been chosen one of ten young women to receive a 1959 Merit Award from Mademoiselle magazine.

For the 17th consecutive year awards are being presented to women in their 20's and early 30's "who have already distinguished themselves in their fields and are expected to achieve even greater honors," according to Betsy Talbot Blackwell, the magazine's editor.

The 28-year-old playwright was chosen on the basis of her Broadway smash hit "A Raisin in the Sun."

The play won the New York Drama Critics' Circle award for being last season's best American play.

CURRENTLY finishing a movie script of Raisin, her future plans include an opera libretto, a visit to West Africa, and completing a novel on post-reconstruction Carolina.

MISS LORRAIN HANSBERRY

The Broadway cinderella girl came to New York in 1950 after quitting the University of Wisconsin where she had studied for two years.

She has worked as a department store clerk, tag girl in a department store, and as aide to a theatrical producer.

As he lay dying, respite her efforts, she performed the spiritual service of baptism and prayer. Subsequently, Shirley was awarded the Carnegie Medal for heroism. Collins Gets Interfaith Award

The Miami Herald
Wed. 6-8-60

By DAVID KRASLOW
Of Our Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Gov LeRoy Collins received the National Interfaith Award Wednesday and urged more "people-to-people contacts within our own communities" as an "antidote to prejudice."

Collins' plea came after he received the award for his "outstanding efforts in the promotion of interfaith goodwill and cooperation . . ."

COLLINS

He spoke before some 200 persons at a luncheon of the Washington Interfaith Committee, which selected him as winner of the fourth annual award. The three previous winners were President Eisenhower, Attorney General William P. Rogers, and FBI Chief J. Edgar Hoover.

Thurs. 6-9-60

"I do not pretend to any specialized knowledge of the psychology of prejudice and intolerance," Collins said. "But I have known them in myself, and I have seen their destructive work in our society."

Collins said he is "convinced . . . that the antidote to prejudice is people — people learning about people who are different from themselves . . .

"We must also realize that we will have to learn to live more harmoniously and more constructively with people of different creeds and colors if we are to avoid spiritual desolation in the communities of our own land."

Collins said that "without intending to appear modest, I seriously question that I deserve" the award.

"If my public record reflects tolerance and understanding, I regard this as no more than conduct in line with my public duty.

"A public official's prime impulse should be one of obligation to every citizen he serves. If he feels that any citizen is outside his range of responsibility, he is unfit to hold the office entrusted to him."

The governor said that "what a man believes may be highly destructive to his own well-being and to the tranquility of society.

"But it is far more destructive to the human personality to seek to coerce beliefs and far more dangerous to the vitality of society to obstruct progress toward truth through dissent, dispute and discovery."

Collins was introduced at the luncheon as a governor who has "dynamically opposed racial discrimination, many times when a man of less courage or less integrity would have remained silent or drifted with the still-strong tide of reaction."

Milton S. Kronheim, Washington civic leader, told the group Collins has "stoutly maintained in the face of violent opposition the necessity of accepting the decisions of the Supreme Court and abiding by the Constitution as it is interpreted by that (court) rather than by the interpretations placed upon the law of the land by men maddened by bigotry and blinded by bias."

He said Collins demonstrated this again "most graphically" several months ago "by the just and reasonable stand he took with respect to the sit-down strikes (at lunch counters) in Florida when he blunted the tempers of extremists on both sides by courageous, affirmative action that struck at the roots of the matter."

Collins also was guest of honor Wednesday night at the annual interfaith baseball game at Griffith Stadium between the Washington Senators and the Kansas City Athletics.

The Washington Interfaith Committee is comprised of representatives from the Knights of Columbus, B'nai B'rith, Almas Temple Shrine, and the order of Ahepa.

At 51st NAACP Confab; Langston Hughes Receives 45th Spingarn Medal

Iowa Bystander, Des Moines, Iowa
Thurs. 6/30/60

Minneapolis.—Honored by the University of Minnesota from which he was graduated in 1923, Roy Wilkins, NAACP executive secretary, Sunday received his alma mater's Outstanding Achievement Award at the closing session of the Association's 51st annual convention.

Also honored at the session was Langston Hughes who received the 45th Spingarn Medal for his many notable literary contributions. Presentation of the award was made by Arthur B. Spingarn, brother of the donor and longtime NAACP president.

Master Strategist

In presenting the university's Outstanding Achievement Award, Vice President Malcolm M. Willey cited the distinguished alumus as a "dynamic spokesman for recognition of the rights and dignity of all men, master strategist in a great crusade to eliminate second-class citizenship, skillful combatant of the anti-democrataic forces of bigotry and ignorance."

Wilkins accepted the award" with gratitude and with humility, certain in the conviction that many dedicated people of a variety of racial and religious backgrounds, northern and southern, have had a share in whatever tasks I have been able to accomplish."

Called Upon Parties

Addressing himself to the tasks of the day, the NAACP leader called upon both the Democratic and Republican parties to adopt civil rights planks which "declare the clear and mandatory role of the federal government in the many-sided segregation process. Federal responsibility in this area," he asserted, "has been obscured in these past six years by a succession of incredible and inept pronouncements on the executive level of government, as well as by a mean and ruthless campaign by the know-nothings on the local, state and congressional levels.

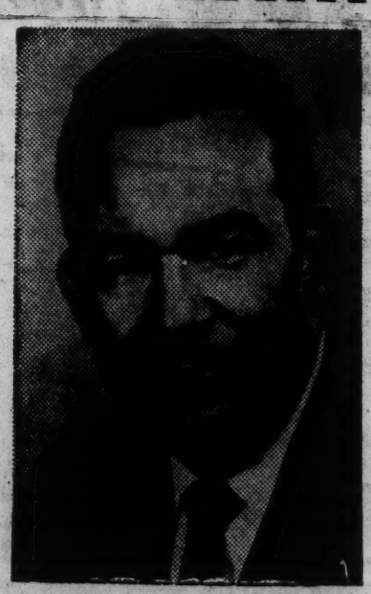
RUSSWURM AWARD WINNERS

A. G. GASTON

JOSEPHINE BAKER



Rev. F. L. GRIFFIN

The National Newspaper Publishers Association honors through its 1960 Russwurm Awards, probably its most diversified list, of meritorious people to date. The honorees include an internationally famous entertainer, a state governor, a magazine publisher, a financier, a minister, a dramatist, a 13-year-old humanitarian, an African leader, a coach, and a defeated candidate who led a voting crusade.

For the first time in a good while, Negro citees outnumber the white, seven to three. While not chosen by design, this ratio reflects the increasing achievements of people of color.

The citations read: "In recognition of outstanding achievement in making possible a richer conception of democratic principles and in tribute for upholding those highest traditions considered as the ideals of the American way of life." The winners, determined in a poll of member publishers, were announced by Frank L. Stanley, Sr., chairman of the NNPA Public Relations Committee, and publisher of the Louisville Defender.

To receive Russwurm Plaques are:

Madam Josephine Baker — For demonstrating that democracy love and human understanding can surmount all superficial barriers created by men. Despite her world citizenship, Mme. Baker has American heritage.

The Honorable Edmund C. Brown, Governor of California—For championing and enacting the most liberal legislation in state government—FEPC, Fair Housing Act, Civil Rights Statutes, Repeal of State Law Against Intermarriage, Non-Discriminating Community Redevelopment and Urban Renewal Program.

Gardner Cowles—For using his publication, LOOK Magazine, most effectively in the cause of liberalism and against racial injustices; and for recognizing journalistic ability irrespective of race.

A. G. Gaston—For unselfish economic leadership in the resistant south by philanthropically coming to the aid of people who were economically pressured solely because they sought their civil rights.

Reverend Francis L. Griffin—For sacrificial and Christian leadership in the desegregation of local Virginia schools in the face of mass resistance.

Lorraine Hansberry — For her deeply moving play, "A Raisin In the Sun" in which she reveals human subjection by implacable adversity tempered by an ultimate courage.

Robert Hill—13-year-old humanitarian cited for vividly demonstrating the Biblical quotation "and a little child shall lead them," by successfully launching a $400,000 medical supplies campaign for the world renowned medical missionary, Dr. Albert Schweitzer who directs a hospital in darkest Africa.

Tom Mboya, Chairman of the African People's Conference—For his dynamic leadership in African politics and labor, and for his unusual crusade "to save the white man from himself."

Coach Ben Schwartzwalder—For demonstrating the true spirit of sports by refusing to bow to Dixie tradition by walking out when his Negro players were discriminated against.

Attorney Russell B. Sugarmon—For his history-making bid and courageous performance in seeking the post of Commissioner of Public Works. As a result, Negroes registered in record numbers and demonstrated unprecedented unity in the area of politics.

Four of these citees will be interviewed on NBC's Monitor radio network program March 11 and 13, and will initiate the 133rd anniversary of the Negro Press. They are: Governor Edmund "Pat" Brown, from California, Lorraine Hansberry from New York City, Robert Hill from Naples, Italy, and Tom Mboya from Nairobi, Kenya East Africa.

On March 16, the anniversary date of the first Negro newspaper, Freedom's Journal, another Russwurm award winner, A. G. Gaston, of Birmingham, Ala., will appear with William O. Walker, NNPA president, of Cleveland, Ohio, on Dave Garroway's television program, "Today."

Negro Extension Agt. Receives Award For Outstanding Farm Improvement Work

Maurice W. Coleman, Negro agricultural agent of Bertie County, N. C. was presented a Superior Service Award here Tuesday by Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson.

The presentation was made during ceremonies on the Washington Monument Grounds where 110 others also were honored. Seven of these received awards for distinguished service, 81 for superior service, and 22 for tenures of 40 years or more.

Among those in the latter group was one retired colored employe, John F. Peterson, a former laboratory aide in the Department's Eastern Utilization Research and Development Division just outside Philadelphia.

Forty-one other awards for length of service and 13 unit citations will be presented later at the headquarters of the employes. One of the unit awards is for distinguished service, and the others for superior service.

Mr. Coleman, who has been with the North Carolina Extension Service for 19 years, received the Superior Service Award for a number of important achievements relating to improved living standards for the farm people of Bertie County.

Over the past 19 years he has helped colored farmers of the county to increase their corn yield from an average of only 24 bushels per acre to 56, their tobacco from 978 pounds to 1,670, and their peanuts from 1,150 to 1,850 pounds per acre.

When Mr. Coleman began work in the county, very few farmers had hogs or cattle. Today, one-third of these farmers are producing livestock for market. And they are growing enough fruits and vegetables to keep their own produce market going year-round.

As a result of the increased income from their larger and more varied production of crops and livestock, scores of families have built new homes, and hundreds have remodeled their dwellings.

Mr. Coleman has not only helped small owners and tenants to become more soundly established in farming, but he has also given some vocational guidance to farm families migrating to towns and cities.

His broader services, which include Rural Development Program activities, have led to the appointment of three additional farm and home agents to his staff. Including clerical workers, there are now seven in his office.

The citation presented to him by Secretary Benson reads: "Superior Service Award for raising the standard of living among the people of Bertie County, N. C., through higher crop yields, improved livestock program, and increased home food production and conservation."

Mr. Coleman graduated from Hampton Institute in 1935, and taught vocational agriculture in North Carolina for five years before joining the Extension Service. He and Mrs. Coleman have two sons and a daughter. Two of these are in college at Hampton.

PARIS — O. Rudolph (Rudy) Aggrey, first director of the American Cultural Center here since 1957, was given the Award for Superior Service, on July 13. The popular young director was named for the citation in Washington on June 21, but was decorated here in Paris at the 4th annual awards ceremony of the U.S. Information Agency, the day before France's Independence Day.

It was Rudy's second honor from the State Department. He was previously given an award for meritorious service three years ago. His present tour of duty ends in September, when he returns to the States for a new assignment.

Mrs. Rose D. Aggrey, his mother, was in Paris to see Rudy get his second award. She was going back home (to Salisbury, N.C.) after attending the inauguration of Dr. Kwame Nkrumah as the first President of the Ghana Republic.

At the Ghana ceremony, she was given a seat of honor because the name of Aggrey is one of the most honored in the new republic. Her late husband, Dr. A. J. K. Aggrey, was born there and later made his mark as an educator in the United States. She herself worked at Livingstone College for many years.
